Missing 'Daddy': Fox affil pulls show

At least one Fox Broadcasting Co. affiliate has balked at airing tonight's 90-minute special "Who's Your Daddy," which has raised the ire of adoption advocacy groups for a premise that revolves around an adopted woman trying to pick her biological father from a group of eight candidates. WRAZ-TV in Raleigh-Durham, N.C., has yanked "Daddy" and instead will air a documentary, "I Have Roots and Branches: Personal Reflections on Adoption," in the 8-9:30 p.m. block slated for "Daddy." WRAZ executives could not be reached for comment during the New Year's holiday weekend, but a promo blurb for tonight's telecast of "Roots and Branches" was prominently featured on the station's Web site. Fox and News Corp. executives have been catching flak from adoption advocates and many other critics since it formally announced the scheduling of "Daddy" last month. (Cynthia Littleton) ▶ FULL STORY
